Cittadinanza, Democrazia e Ambiente: quali modelli di Partecipazione?
27-28 October 2025

Venue
Sala Lauree, Department of Law of University of Perugia (Italy)

October 27, afternoon

On October 27th, PhD candidates Marisa Schmitt Siqueira Mendes and Luana Abrahão Francisco, together with PhD Jaïne Cristina Suzin, recently awarded her doctorate, took part in the workshop entitled “Cittadinanza, democrazia e ambiente: quali modelli di partecipazione?”, held at the Sala Lauree of the Department of Law at the University of Perugia (Italy).

The discussions addressed topics related to new technologies, the environment, and the climate crisis, with particular emphasis on water management and governance.

In attendance were Professors Carla Piffer and Denise Schmitt Siqueira Garcia (PPCJ/UNIVALI), Jacopo Paffarini and Maria Chiara Locchi (University of Perugia), and Enrico Buono, who served as the moderator of the discussions. Undergraduate Law students from UNIVALI enrolled in the Double Degree Program with the University of Perugia also participated.

This event was part of the Water4All Project, funded in Brazil by FAPESC (Public Call 12/2022 – FAPESC ABROAD), coordinated by Professor Carla Piffer, and integrated into the Joint International Research Program between PPCJ/UNIVALI and the Department of Law of the University of Perugia.

October 28, morning

On October 28th, Professors Carla Piffer and Denise Schmitt Siqueira Garcia, from PPCJ/UNIVALI, delivered their presentations during the continuation of the workshop “Cittadinanza, democrazia e ambiente: quali modelli di partecipazione?”, held at the Sala Lauree of the Department of Law at the University of Perugia (Italy).

The discussions on the second day focused on issues related to climate democracy, with an emphasis on perspectives from the Global South.

The session also featured contributions from Professors Giuseppe Meloni and António Goba Júnior, both from the Instituto Superior Dom Bosco in Mozambique, as well as from Professors Jacopo Paffarini and Maria Chiara Locchi (University of Perugia).
